aptop A: "Appears to be working" is subjective. Your problem was because the system firmware was broken, and after re-installing the firmware it worked just fine. Your description sounds more like that of a hardware problem than of an OS/firmware problem. As The Advocate reported last week, a New Orleans judge overturned a $26 million settlement last month reached between Gov. Bobby Jindal's office and the family of a boy who died after being airlifted to a New Orleans hospital on a gurney that broke under the weight of a victim's stretcher. However, a hearing was set for Thursday in the 1st Judicial District Court in New Orleans, where Judge Benita G. Clemente-Jones will hear arguments over whether she will stay with the original ruling or accept a motion by Attorney General James Stinson to have the case dismissed. The hearing comes after Stinson's office filed a motion for the district court to withdraw its previous ruling that concluded the settlement was proper. Stinson's office argued that the attorney general's office had no knowledge of the ruling until after it was issued, according to court documents. Clemente-Jones and Assistant Attorney General Austin Hackworth Jr. were in court last month, but were not present Thursday for arguments. "Stinson's office) disagrees with the Court's decision and its rationale," wrote Assistant District Attorney Jennifer Hassell, a lawyer for the Attorney General's Office. "Specifically, they argue the Court did not follow the governing law." And in a court document, Stinson's office wrote that it "took this step to protect the citizens of Louisiana from having a court-ordered settlement without its consent." The Attorney General's Office declined to comment on the matter. Tiffany DePierre, a spokeswoman for Jindal, released a statement on Wednesday saying, "We are hopeful the court will follow the letter of the law and not be swayed by the public's emotion over a tragic incident." Meanwhile, in the second case, the family of a New Orleans man who died in September 2012, after suffering a seizure at home, have filed suit against Stinson's office and two nurses at NOLA Medical Center, alleging that the state and hospital failed to 82157476af
